

If review allowed, why bother to have process

Editor,

As a resident of Youbou I am writing this letter to thank the directors who had the courage and voted against the issuance of a Temporary Use Permit for the Capital City Kart Club.

These directors made the right decision. This time the rules were followed. A public meeting took place, the electors said no. The APC recommended against the permit. The EASC recommended disapproval to the CVRD directors. The CVRD directors voted against the permit. It's democracy at work.

So what is the problem?

Well, a certain group of directors, in conjunction with a special interest group, have decided that this doesn't fit their brand of democracy and now want to revisit the issue, an issue fairly voted against from which I believe there is legally no escape. If revisiting an issue that went through all the hoops is allowed, then why bother doing the process at all?

I would rather remain a citizen with a voice than become a subject with none.

John Waddington,

Youbou